

Install guide for (2011-2014 Dodge Charger GPS Navigation RB5 8.4N Radio)

Before you begin, make sure to checkout our install video. We spend a good amount of time getting these videos just right so that they will be a helpful guide.

Part lists

- 8.4" Screen for RE2/RB5
- Dash Bezel with 8.4" Opening
- RE2/RB5 Module
- HVAC Control Panel

Tools required for installation, socket sizes & whatnot.

- Light Source
- Pry Tool
- Flathead Screwdriver

Skill Level: 2

Time Investment: 1-2 hours

Step 1: To start, pull your steering wheel toward yourself and down to give room to work.

Step 2: Next, remove the factory bezel; it is only held in with retainer clips. Using your pry tool to work the bezel out.

Step 3: Lean the bezel and old radio screen forward so you can disconnect the old radio screen.

Step 4: Take your old bezel and remove the three AC vents. Push the plastic tabs outward to release the AC vent.

Step 5: Remove the old radio screen from the old bezel. We need to reuse the four philips screws for the new bezel and screen combo.

Step 6: With your pry tool, we need to remove the factory HVAC controls. They are only held in with retainer clips.

Step 7: Lean the HVAC controls toward yourself and disconnect the one connection.

Step 8: Next we need to remove the four philips screws holding in the factory CD player.

Step 9: With the CD player free, pull it out and disconnect the connections on its rear.

Step 10: Next with the dash open, if you got the RB5, we need to install a GPS antenna, if you upgraded to XM radio, we need to install a combo antenna that does GPS and XM signal then route it under the dash. Find a metal bracket to attach a magnetic antenna to or use double-sided tape to secure the antenna.

Step 11: Route the GPS antenna connection to this location so it can be plugged into the RE2/RB5 module.

Step 12: Reconnect the connection to the rear of the new CD module.

Step 13: Slide the CD module into the dash and secure with the same four philips screws.

Step 14: Reconnect the HVAC control connector.

Step 15: Install the new HVAC control panel into the dash. You'll hear the retainer clips snap into place.

Step 16: Attach the new screen to the bezel with the four screws from your old bezel.

Step 17: Snap in the three AC vents from your old bezel.

Step 18: Plug in the screen connector to the new screen.

Step 19: Carefully align the bezel and push it into place. You'll hear the retainer clips snap into place.

Step 20: Realign your steering wheel if you moved it to give yourself more room to work the bezel out.

Step 21: Start the vehicle and check your installation of the upgrade. Mainly check your climate screen. If AUTO is grayed out and the temperature is stuck at 72 or 22 degrees then you will need to replace your factory HVAC module. Follow the next few steps for that process.

Step 22: After programming, there is a 30% chance you will also need to replace your climate control module with one of the following part numbers: 68185499AF, 68185499AD; 68185499AE; 68185499AC.

Step 23: Open the glove box and detached the glove box release cable.

Step 24: Squeeze the back corners of the glove box to release it down.

Step 25: Then you can wiggle the glove box out of its hinge. Place the glove box off to the side.

Step 26: Next there are six philips screws that need to be removed.

Step 27: There is a trim at the bottom of the glove box opening that needs to be pushed down to release the retainer clips; you do not need to remove this piece fully.

Step 28: Use your pry tool to pop out the dash's side trim. It is only held in with retainer clips.

Step 29: You'll now be able to pull out the inner glove box as it only has retainer clips left holding it in place.

Step 30: You'll see the HVAC module with a white connector plugged into it. There is a small screw holding it in place. Unplug the HVAC module then remove screw to slide module out.

Step 31: Install the new module you acquired back into the same location. Don't forget to plug it in. Reassemble the glove box.

Step 3: Enjoy your purchase and again thank you for choosing Infotainment.com for your upgrades.
